Better than Pills

YOU WILL NEVER wish to take another dose of pills after having once used Chamberlain's Tablets. They are easier and more pleasant to take, more gentle and mild in their action and more reliable. They leave the bowels in a natural condition, while the use of pills is often followed by severe constipation, requiring a constant increase in the dose. Every bottle guaranteed by your druggist.

We are Exposed to Tubercular Germs

every day. Post-mortem examinations often show that tuberculosis had been arrested by strengthening the lungs before the germs gained mastery.

You can strengthen your resistance-power by taking Scott's Emulsion. It contains available energy in concentrated form, which quickly nourishes all the organs of the body. It repairs waste—makes rich, active blood and supplies energy to the steering cells. It's timely use enables the body to resist tuberculosis.

For tubercular colds and bronchitis nothing compares with Scott's Emulsion.

Refuse substitutes—insist on SCOTT'S.

WOES OF BRIDE-ELECT

By BENNETT JOHNSON.

"For mercy's sake," cried the girl in the new fall suit, "when did the last ship get in from Paris? Where did you get the clothes? I never saw anything so gorgeous in all my life! Your hat is a dream, and that veil is another. You are a marvel! What for, especially?"

The other young woman smiled complacently. "Do I strike you that way? she inquired in gratified tones. "Then I must be all right, for that is precisely the effect I intended to produce. If it had been a shade less I should have considered my toilet a failure! I wanted to make it impossible for any one to think of me as anything but the most fashionable thing on earth!"

"Well, you've done it," declared the girl in the new fall suit. "Why?" "You know," explained the gorgeously appareled one, "that Harry's family had never met me before we were engaged. They lived miles away across town. After we were engaged Harry said they were all coming to call on me. Naturally I was anxious to make a good impression."

"Well, that was easy," said her friend. "It never is what one would call hard work to look at you!"

"Wait!" said the fashionable one in hollow tones. "For two weeks I went around from breakfast time till the lights were out at night, so dressed up that nobody dreamed of asking me to dust the living room, as usual, or do anything but ornament the place. Then a bushel of tomatoes came the day mother had to go to luncheon. 'Go on!' I told her, heroically. 'I will make the chili sauce and the catch-up!'"

"We never leave such things to the cook. In fact, to get rid of the cook I told her to take the afternoon off, so that I would have a clear field in the kitchen. I suppose there are wonderful individuals who can work up a bushel of tomatoes while attired in a neat blue serge with white collar and cuffs, like the angelic persons we see in the pictures, and emerge unruined."

"But when I tackle anything like tomatoes I get into it up to my elbows. There were tomatoes on the walls, and tomatoes splattered in my hair and over my face and my apron was a sight."

"Everything on the stove started boiling at once and I was hot and frustrated when the bell rang."

"Let it ring!" said I to myself. It rang again. You know there is something intensely human and personal about a doorbell that you aren't answering. It seems so accusing and reproachful. Just as I said for the fourth time 'Let it ring,' I dropped a preserving spoon splash into the catchup and rushed madly to the door."

"I had remembered that the dress-maker was to send home my dress that afternoon for the dance that night. I wrenched open the front door to catch the figure descending the steps."

"Oh, yes, it was Harry's mother, dear. It couldn't have been any one else on earth, you know. There she stood gazing at her daughter-in-law-elect, who resembled at that moment a cross between an inebriated cook and a squashed tomato. Harry's mother is one of those neat, perfect women, to whom a hair out of place is a perfectly unexplainable phenomenon. I know she burst into tears at her son's fate the instant she withdrew from my presence. And the tomato catchup all burned up while I was sitting in the best parlor chair smearing it with tomatoes and acting as though I was quite happy."

"The men came to clean out the furnace the other day, and mother and I took the same time to clean the storeroom. You know what a storeroom does to you—it puts cobwebs in your hair and grimes you with dust, and you get soot on your nose and wear the gown that is worse than your worst one. When the bell rang this time—it being the maid's day out—mother said, 'Oh, bother! That must be Mrs. Phipps for the sewing society stuff! Do run up and hand her the bundle I left in the front hall!'"

"I ran, incidentally tumbling over the furnace man's litter and putting my hands into a basket of soot and ashes, which I dusted off on my apron as I went. Yes, it was Harry's married sister, who takes two hours every day to dress and hyphenates her name."

"I will say nothing of the day Harry introduced me to a cousin of his whom we met by chance, when it had been raining and I had no umbrella. You know what my hair looks like when it gets damp—exactly like straggly shoe laces!"

"Nor will I mention the time I met Harry's younger sister. It was in a beauty parlor, where I had my hair pulled back from my countenance and cold cream all over my face. Are you able to imagine me smiling in a self-possessed way and saying, 'So glad to meet you, at last?'"

"Well—I am now waiting for the taxi which is to bear me in all my present splendor to make a round of calls on mother, married sister, younger sister and cousin. Do you blame me?"

"Mercy, no!" said her friend. "But I am sure the taxi will go to smash and hurl you into a mud puddle in front of Harry's mother's house!"—Chicago Daily News.

It's Nature.

"We started out on a joy ride, but found the car was a deep disguise for something else."

"What was it a disguise for?"

"The trouble wagon."

MORAL NOT HARD TO FIND

Probably We All Have Known People to Whom This Chronicle Will Have Significance.

There was a large Thomas cat that had its habitation in a store. It was reported to be a fine blooded animal from a family of distinguished rat destroyers. The cat was a beauty and everybody round the store took a turn at furnishing grub suited to the taste of a blooded cat.

It was observed, however, that there was no reduction of the rat or mice population, and the proprietor of the store commenced to inquire into the reason why. He first tried the cat on a rat that had been caught in a trap, but the feline expressed no interest or animation. He looked at the rat and then walked away. The storekeeper was disappointed, but not entirely discouraged. He thought perhaps that cat's specialty was mice, and as he had a mouse or two that had been caught alive in a trap, he turned them loose in front of the cat, but it paid no more attention to them than a sheep would to a rare done beefsteak.

"I think," said the storekeeper, "that I am onto this situation. I will fire the next employee who gives that cat anything to eat." For two days the Thomas cat did a good deal of howling and wore a look of injured innocence. He felt that he had been wronged and was ready to start an insurrection, but as that didn't seem to get him anywhere, he turned loose on the rats and mice in a way that was surprising.

The second day after this change of program the rats held a convention to consider what ought to be done. When the leading orator among the rats arose, he said: "Fellow rats, this is no time for talk. What we want to do is to move. That cat hasn't any more natural ability than he had before, but he has concluded that he either has to hustle or starve, and I have discovered that when a cat gets in that frame of mind his neighborhood is no place for rats."

Many men and women, as well as cats, have never amounted to a whoop just because they never had to hustle. —Topeka Capital.

Purblind Mossback.
Nothing so astonishing as the man of routine formulas and precedents as success attending original methods.

Fortune Telling.

Fortune telling is almost as old as the human race itself. We have no knowledge of the time when or place where it originated. We only know that the practice was in vogue as far back as we can go. Some claim that it had its beginning with the astrologers, who claimed that they were able to foretell the future by aid of the planets. The oldest of the nations were familiar with the practice, and by the gypsies it has been carried all over the world. It is perfectly natural for man to want to know about tomorrow and next year, and it required but little effort on his part to listen to the fortune tellers. To this day the business is carried on with profit by the gypsies and others who impose upon the credulity of the superstitious.

THE EMPORIUM

MARVEL IN ANIMAL SOUND

Traveler Writes Feelingly of Wonderful Bray Put Forth by the Donkeys of China.

In all the east today the donkey is a favorite means of transportation, both for travelers and commercial burdens. It was so in the days of the patriarchs, Isaac and Jacob, and so it will remain probably for ages to come. But nothing in China is just like the same thing anywhere else in the world, the donkey being no exception. Dr. Chester of Nashville says: "Their gait is a rough, insufferable jog, and their bray is a unique phenomenon."

The power of heredity, working through millenniums of isolation, with no modification from foreign admixture, has developed in the bray of the Chinese donkey a quality all its own. There are no words in English to describe the heart-rending pathos of it. It was as if an appeal to heaven against the cruelty and oppression of ages were at last finding utterance in one long, loud, undulating wail. And when our party of three met another party of six and all nine of the donkeys began at one time to exchange the compliments of the day, then pathos gave place to terror and one could only sit appalled and trembling as the mighty reverberation rolled away on its journey round the world."

Concerning Greenbacks.
Forty-five per cent. of the greenbacks of this country are of one, two and five dollar denomination.

What the Eyebrows Tell Us.
There is more character in the eyebrows than one would suppose. If they are very much arched, they denote a weak, changeable nature. Eyebrows that meet signify bad temper and a jealous disposition; but, if there is a good wide space between them, their owner is probably very unselfish and good tempered. If they are darker than the hair, their owner will be passionate but inconsistent in love; if lighter, they reveal a weak disposition.

HAVE MANY YEARS OF LIFE

Residents of English Village Favored Beyond Other Mortals in Matter of Longevity.

Horndon-on-the-Hill, a village of six hundred persons, in the county of Essex, England, has attracted notice as being a spot where old age reigns in undisputed triumph. Walk through the picturesque narrow main street which twists across the hillside and from the doorways the passerby will see smiling at him the happy, ruddy faces of the ancients of Horndon. A London newspaper the other day found in this village, which by the way has not a doctor in it, twelve persons whose united ages are 1,640 years, these ages ranging from eighty-four to ninety years, while young persons, men and women of seventy-five and thereabout, were too numerous to deserve notice. One lad of eighty-six, who is on the way to be a philosopher, said: "A smile and a kiss made the world easy and do a lot of keeping one young, this and a fair share of work." In illustration of a part of this axiom he snatched a kiss from his wife, who is one year his senior. "You're nearly as bad as when you were young," said that lady, "and he wanted a lot of watching then."

Personal Interest.
As far as the ordinary, every-day man is concerned one pound of personal interest will outweigh a ton of public welfare.

Which One Gets the Money.
"Who is the benevolent looking old gentleman riding along in a dilapidated buggy?"
"That's Dr. Soothers, who specializes in children's diseases. He's very successful in his practice."
"And who is the pompous looking man who just whirled past us in a magnificent automobile, with a chauffeur in livery?"
"Oh, that's Dr. Flimmin, who makes a specialty of treating society's peccoles."—Birmingham Age Herald.

Comfort in walking is essential to keep one smiling and in good health.
